三、篇章結構題（每題 5 分，共 25 分 • 學測大考題型）

請閱讀短文，將選項 (A)~(E) 五個句子填入最適當的空格中：

The exceptional olfactory abilities of canines have transformed modern rescue and detection operations. 11 While human eyes rely heavily on visual cues, dogs perceive the world primarily through scent. In airports, quarantine dogs prevent dangerous agricultural pests from crossing borders. 12 During earthquakes, search teams rely on dogs to pinpoint victims buried beneath debris. 13 In Taiwan, specialized sniffer dogs even inspect trees for fungal diseases. 14 As science advances, the partnership between humans and working dogs continues to flourish. 15

- (A) Their acute sense of smell can isolate specific odors even in noisy, crowded terminals.
- (B) Canines have over 300 million olfactory receptors compared to a human's mere six million.
- (C) These dedicated animals work tirelessly under extreme conditions to save precious lives.
- (D) Their early warnings prevent infected trees from falling and causing severe damage.
- (E) Their selfless service proves that dogs are indeed humanity's most reliable allies.
